Australia Awards

Disability Inclusive Development Fact Sheet

The Australian Government is committed to ensuring that people with disability are included in, and equally benefit from, Australia's development assistance. The objective of Australia's work in disability inclusive development is to improve the quality of life of people living with disability through:

- enhancing participation and empowerment of people with disability as contributors, leaders and decision makers in community, government and the private sector.
- reducing poverty among people with disability.
- improving equality for people with disability in all areas of public life, including service provision, education and employment.

The Australian Government works with partners, people with disability and their representative organisations to achieve this, recognising the vital role of people with disability in effective disability inclusive development.

Disability inclusion and Australia Awards

Australia Awards provide opportunities for the next generation of global leaders, including those with disability, to study in Australia. Australia Awards proactively encourages, selects and supports people with disability to complete Masters-level Scholarships aligned with the priority sectors.

Principles and procedures for disability support

Additional support is provided to people living with disability at all stages of the Scholarship cycle. Applicants with a disability are encouraged to notify the Australia Awards office as early as possible, preferably when applying for an Australia Award Scholarship.

Early and full notification of a disability will not negatively affect the assessment of an applicant's eligibility and will enable Australia Awards to provide appropriate support throughout the application and placement process (including any support that may be required in meeting eligibility requirements).

Reasonable adjustments will be provided to allow scholars with disability to participate in their Scholarship on an equal basis with all other scholars. Each scholar's support requirements will be different and will be assessed on a case-by-case basis.

Australian universities have an obligation to provide students with disability reasonable adjustments to support their academic endeavours, such as additional training and/or access to assistive technology. Australia Awards will provide 'non-academic' reasonable adjustments to ensure that scholars with disability are adequately mobilised and supported and have a positive experience in Australia.

Profile: Lubna Hashmat

Taking the lead to ensure inclusive development in Pakistan

Australia Awards alumna Lubna Hashmat has been instrumental in designing community development projects that have benefited over 500,000 people across Pakistan.

Australia Awards alumna Lubna Hashmat has taken the initiative and leadership to design, introduce and implement successful community development projects to ensure inclusive development across Pakistan.

Since completing her Australia Awards Scholarship in 2002, she has been instrumental in designing more than 60 community development projects and has mobilised more than USD16 million to implement these programs. These programs have so far benefitted more than 500,000 community members, including people with disability, women survivors of violence, those affected by natural and man-made disasters, and extremely poor families living in remote and rural areas of all provinces of Pakistan. The efforts have been recognised nationally and internationally.

Before completing her Master in Development Administration at the Australian National University (ANU), made possible through an Australia Awards Scholarship, Lubna was working at entry-level positions. She wished for more responsibility and felt she was not able to utilise her skills and talent as much as she would be able to in a leadership role. After completing her master's degree in 2002, she re-joined the Swiss NGO Program Office, a program of Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation (SDC), where she was assigned responsibility for a program that required the strengthening of 25–30 Pakistani NGOs to have effective governance systems and community development programs.

The program was a great success and was transformed into an independent Pakistani NGO. This was the birth of CHIP (Civil Society Human and Institutional Development Program). The independent organisation started functioning in Islamabad in 2005 and expanded to Punjab and Sindh. It mobilised resources from sources other than SDC and achieved financial sustainability within three years. Lubna was appointed as Director of Programs in 2005 and was later given the responsibility of CEO in mid-2007.

At CHIP, Lubna designed an inclusive community development program under which communities were further enabled to design and execute community development processes through the inclusion of people with disability. Federal, Provincial and District Governments were key partners in supporting the process. UK Department for International Development funded the program for four years. At the conclusion of the program, external evaluation declared it a successful example in which mainstream development actors were sensitised and trained on inclusive development to include people with disability in the community development processes.

Lubna also developed guidelines for the Program, making mainstream development inclusive through a consultative process with communities and major stakeholders. These guidelines were endorsed by the Federal Ministry of Social Welfare and Special Education for its onwards compliance under the system. The guidelines demonstrated how people with disability could be mainstreamed in the community development process.

The success of the program led to its replication in the districts of Skardu and Ghanche in Gilgit-Baltistan and Bhakkar in South Punjab. By June 2018, 2233 people with disability had been medically rehabilitated and made part of the community development process through their induction in community organisations, enabling them to earn income, improve their education skills, and participate in sports and recreational activities.

Lubna also designed an approach for the social and economic empowerment of women survivors of violence. Under this approach, not only were women survivors of violence empowered, but also their male counterparts were made to realise the importance of keeping a positive attitude in family and community relations to attain happiness in life. More than 500 women survivors of violence attained social and economic empowerment. More than 20,000 community members were made to realise the importance of adopting positive attitudes in family and social relations.

Lubna had a wonderful experience in Australia. She found the academic system competitive but flexible, which accommodated differences of multiple contexts for students coming from more than 50 countries. Lubna was also awarded appreciation letters from the Vice-Chancellor of ANU for two consecutive years for maintaining High Distinctions for all her subjects. She believes her Scholarship has transformed her life and career from an ordinary professional to a professional who always looks out for innovative ideas, logical connections, consistent approach and quality standards. 'My academic training in Australia has sensitised me towards a systematic approach to plan and execute work,' she says. 'I am truly grateful for my Australia Awards experience, which I believe was instrumental in getting to the place that I am at today.'

Profile: Muddassir Riaz Malik

Making a difference in public sector administration in Pakistan

Australia Awards alumnus
Muddassir Riaz Malik is making significant policy changes in Pakistan's public sector.

Australia Awards alumnus*

Australia Awards alumnus Muddassir Riaz Malik is making a significant impact in developing districts in Punjab, Pakistan. He has been instrumental in improving several public service initiatives in districts under his purview. Muddassir received an Australia Awards Scholarship in 2015, through which he graduated with a Master of Public Policy from the Australian National University.

Upon returning home, Muddassir was appointed as the Deputy Commissioner in Jhang, a district of Punjab, where he made a difference to uplift the community while contributing towards policy reforms and implementation. In June 2018 he was appointed Deputy Commissioner of the Multan district.

During his time in Jhang he dealt with matters of land revenue collection, alongside administering education and the health department in the district. He was also responsible for the coordination among various provincial departments in the district for effective policy implementation along with chairing the district intelligence committee for maintaining law and order.

As the Deputy Commissioner of Jhang, Muddassir successfully reformed the District Head Quarter (DHQ) Hospital Jhang through upgrading facilities, improving staff training and implementing better administration policies. His efforts started to show results within four months – leading to an increase from 1,600 consultations per day in the Out-Patient Department (OPD) to 3,800 per day. This is the highest average number of outpatient department consultations ever recorded in any DHQ in Punjab. This was achieved through various interventions, including the introduction of new female registration associates, patient facilitators and pharmacy associates; increasing facilitation counters to manage the load; increasing availability of medicines; and improving doctor attendance. Due to Muddassir's efforts, DHQ Jhang Hospital became the first DHQ in Punjab that not only achieved ISO 9001 and 14001 certifications but also received minimum service delivery standard accreditation from the Punjab Health Care Commission.

Muddassir additionally introduced international-standard sports facilities for both boys and girls in the district of Jhang. These facilities include an International Swimming Federation standard swimming pool, sports centre for fifteen in-door games, separate basketball courts for boys and girls, hockey grounds and cricket pitches. Muddassir believes that sports are an essential part of physical development and character building for both boys and girls and that such facilities will bear fruit in terms of enhancing tomorrow's communities.

Muddassir says the love for sports he developed during his time in Australia was instrumental when he introduced sporting facilities with international standards in districts of Pakistan.

Muddassir has been using skills acquired during his time in Australia to fulfil his duties as a public servant. 'When my children started studying in Australia during my Scholarship, I observed the emphasis put on sports in Australian schools... the love I developed for sports when in Australia, and having realised the positive outcome of sports activities, I introduced state-of-the-art sports facilities in the district,' he says, 'I used impact assessment studies – a course at Crawford – to improve service delivery in the health sector in Jhang.'

Muddassir adds that his Australia Awards Scholarship has had an immense impact in his career development: 'Australia Awards helped my career with knowledge, diverse experience and a skill set that I learnt at the university. I developed my research skills during my time Australia, which was very useful during my assignment as the Additional Secretary Welfare, especially when I was given the task to procuring a helicopter for the Government of Punjab!'

'Australia is now just like my second home and interacting with Australians is always a pleasure.' Australia Awards is a great influence in his personal and professional life. 'I have not only become more confident and independent in dealing with my personal matters, but I have also learnt how to live with people of different nationalities and views.' Muddassir appreciates that his time studying through his Scholarship in Australia has helped him develop a better sense of listening to arguments as well as tolerating them. 'As a person I have become more rational, composed and focused.'

In 2018, Muddassir was transferred from Jhang to Multan as the Deputy Commissioner. Multan is the 7th largest city of Punjab with a population of over 4.7Mn and is considered the largest city in Southern Punjab.

Muddassir plans on continuing his work as a civil servant and aims to also specialise in health policy or water resource management through further education.
